

Golda Meir Brings Israel's Message to Detroit Today in Behalf of Embattled Community; Local Emergency Fund Campaign Exceeds $4,250,000

Israel's great lady the, former Foreign Minister and her country's former ambassador to Soviet Russia, will be here today to address two functions. At noon Mrs. Meir will speak at a luncheon meeting at the Sheraton-Cadillac Hotel which has been called in behalf of the Israel Emergency Fund. Tonight she will speak at Temple Israel.

Mrs. Meir will report on the latest occurrences in Israel and will present the Israel government's position on many emerging problems related to the approaching negotiations with Arab states in an effort to attain a permanent peace.

Israel Emergency Fund activities continue here at full speed. As of Thursday, approximately $4,250,000 has been contributed in gifts supplementary to those already made to the Allied Jewish Campaign which concluded last month.

Paul Zuckerman, chairman of the Detroit Israel Emergency Fund campaign, headed a delegation of Detroiters who attended a national meeting in behalf of the fund in New York Monday night. The fund swelled to large proportions at the New York meeting.

Zuckerman remained in New York until this morning when he was to arrive here with Golda Meir. He stayed on at national United Jewish Appeal headquarters to work with volunteer workers and staff in the gathering of large sums to meet the Israel emergency.

Detroit Jewry Among Leading Communities Aiding Emergency Fund, Israel Bond Drive

Detroit Jewry is responding so generously to the appeal for the Israel Emergency Fund and for the purchase of Israel Bonds that this community once again is emerging among the leaders in the land.

Increased interest in the Israel Bond campaign, as was evidenced at the dinner Monday at Cobo Hall which was attended by 1,500 people, and the large sums invested, pointed to a record year for Israel Bonds and to the enrollment of many hundreds of new participants in Bond drives.

Under the leadership of Paul Zuckerman, approximately 95 prominent Detroiters, meeting at the Zuckerman home on June 8, set a precedent for generosity by Detroit Jewry unparalleled in the history of philanthropic activities.

After hearing a stirring address by Aryeh Louis Pincus, chairman of the Jewish Agency for Israel, the group pledged the sum of $3,150,000 to the newly-created Israel Emergency Fund. These gifts are additional to the contributions the same men made to the Allied Jewish Campaign.

Irwin Cohn, chairman of the Allied Jewish Campaign cash collection committee, reported simultaneously that the sum of $2,000,000 was collected in advance and was remitted promptly to Israel. He reported that pledges made to the Israel Emergency Fund as well as payments on previous pledges are sent without delay to Israel to assist in upholding Israel's hands economically, to aid in harvesting neglected crops, to keep industries at work, to help rebuild what has been destroyed in the war operations.

Supplementing his earlier address and acknowledging Detroit Jewry's generosity, Pincus assured the gathering that Israel would be informed at once about "the great response."

"Working together," Pincus said, "we will repair what has been damaged

JERUSALEM — The Israeli ship "Dolphine" passed the Gulf of Aqaba today towards the port of Eilat under an Israeli flag, while life began returning to normal throughout Israel. Military activity along all the battle lines came to a halt although Israeli security forces continued with measures aimed at cleaning up sniper activity and small pockets of resistance within the territory newly occupied by Israel.

The nightly blackout was partially lifted in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa but can be instantly restored by the use of central controls in any of the cities. Street lights went on in all cities and neon signs in shops and cafes invited the public to resume purchases of consumer goods and to patronize various places of entertainment. For the first time since the start of the war, movie theaters opened up and were immediately filled up with patrons.

The majority of the Israelis filling the streets in the cities are now khaki-clad soldiers, many of them carrying newly-acquired souvenirs of last week's campaigns in Sinai, Jordan or Syria. Mingling among the crowds are Israeli soldiers wearing Jordanian officers' caps or Syrian Army jackets. In contrast to the general feeling of joy and relief at the resounding victories over the Arab forces were those Israeli families whose dear ones were lost in battle.

Life in the areas newly occupied by Israeli forces was also beginning to

The Israeli freighter Dolphine is shown here as it entered the Gulf of Aqaba escorted by an Israeli torpedo boat off Sarm-el-Sheikh, the fortress captured from the Egyptians. Thus ended the Arab threat to deny Israel freedom of the seas as the Israeli boat sailed on to Eilat under the White-Blue banner with the Magen David.
